

NEW YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, Sept. 1.

As I walked home from the theatre last night the fragrant mass of the leaves beneath my feet was a reminder that the last evening of summer had vanished, and that the papers were not premature in announcing the commencement of the theatrical fall and winter season.

In truth, last evening and yesterday afternoon included two or three dramatic events about which it may not be out of place to say something. In the first place Mrs. Lander appeared at the Broadway Theatre as 'Queen Elizabeth,' supported by the Mr. J. H. Taylor, who, as the 'Earl of Essex,' has worthily won great popularity. In the second place, Miss Magie Mitchell opened Wood's Museum in the evening with the new play of 'Lorelei,' the museum having previously been opened, however, by the Galton opera bouffe company, at two o'clock, in two Offenbachian vaudevilles, for which they were scarcely better. These operettas I did not hear, and consequently cannot speak of them, but Mr. Barnum made a speech, the substance of which was a repetition of what he has lately been publishing in cards, in support of his successor, Mr. Wood. It is understood that P. T. Barnum is the back-bone of the establishment in short, and that he has enough backbone of his own left to humbug the public through another half century and then publish a book informing his readers what fools they were. Everything that was left out of the fire in Barnum's late tumble-down shanty, has found its appropriate place in Wood's Museum. Of this establishment I have not a word to say in disparagement now that it is turned to no legitimate use. Its shelves are by no means so full of natural and artificial curiosities as they might be, but then, a new measure is hardly expected to be pletoric in this respect. The building began its career a little more than a year ago, namely, on June 17, 1867, as Barnard's Opera House, opening with 'Jenny Lind and a Husband for an Hour.' The pretty little theatre was attached to it—it's a wonder Mr. Barnum didn't insist on its being called a 'lecture-room,' only people are not so prudish here as they are in another city that shall be nameless—is a greater improvement upon the old one than can be imagined. As for the play of 'Lorelei,' when I say that it is 'Fun and Little Barfoot' both put together under another title, I give as graphic a description of it as I am able. Kelly and Leon's, and the San Francisco Minstrels, likewise, reopened last night in their respective halls, the former producing 'Barber Blue,' and the latter 'Barber Brown.' Speaking of the 'Only Leon' artistically, and not humorously, he is one of the wonders of the age. I might write an entire letter about him if I chose, and I am surprised he didn't 'take' in Philadelphia. It is not astonishing that he calls himself the 'Only.' Few real prima donnas wear more magnificent dresses than he. Upon the negro minstrel stage there is no approach to them, and his stage jewels are admitted to be among the finest and most expensive in the United States. Of the performances of 'Barber Blue' and 'Barber Brown' I can say nothing, the dense nature of the audience disabling me, at the late hour I arrived, from getting more than a glimpse every ten minutes of the stage. The house at the Broadway Theatre, in honor of Mrs. Lander, was equally crowded, and that lady was awarded a reception as warm as the weather and much more inspiring, stimulated by the applause, the like of which she seldom receives here, or indeed, in any other city where I have heard her since her return to the stage, she acted with her utmost tenderness and utmost vigor, and proved herself what her theatrical sisters and brothers pronounce her, 'immense.' Another dramatic event is going to occur to-night. It is the debut at the Stadt Theatre of Mr. Hermann Hendricks, the distinguished German actor, in the role of the 'Duke Albrecht,' in the German historical and scenic tragedy of that name. His second appearance is to be as 'William Tell.' The music stores are full of his pictures. The German population is full of his praise, and report says that he is paid $1000 per night. I hope he is.

If Newark will not feel offended at being spoken of as a suburb of New York, I might say that a singular experiment is going to be tried there this afternoon. A Mr. Frank Vesley there has invented a patent safety coffin. He claims that any one who happens to be buried therein alive could make his way out of both the coffin and the grave on the return of his vital powers. Accordingly, he proposes to allow himself to be buried to-morrow in the usual way, and to remain in that condition for the space of two hours. At the expiration of that interval he proposes to resurrect himself, and to come forth unaided and uninjured. He has invited the State, county, and city officials to be present, and also the ubiquitous reporter, all of whom have promised to witness his obsequies with interest and pleasure.

Of course, all Philadelphia knows by this time that the late dance-house keeper, John Allen, graphically introduced to the public by Mr. Oliver Dyer as the Wicket Man in New York, closed up his dance-house at midnight on Saturday, never to reopen it more. Indeed, the only wonder is that the news has not been telegraphed across the cable, and that his Sunday speech has not by this time winged its way on the lightning to the uttermost parts of the earth. So far as worldly prosperity goes, I am convinced that after the ventilation and gratuitous advertisement Mr. Allen has enjoyed, he might make a fortune by lecturing on 'Rum and Religion.' If Mr. Dyer saw in him the materials for a good paying sensational article, few of Mr. Dyer's brother-writers will feel disposed to find fault with him for working Allen up into a slashing magazine paper. That the life of a private man should be hacked and bawled and pilled to pieces for the mere sake of manufacturing a spy magazine article, is a fact which I fear few magazine writers are casuists enough to care about discountenancing. If Brown can get $20 a page instead of $15, by working some hitherto undiscovered or unexplored vein, no one whose opinion is worth a jot will blame Brown, but amidst envy, will admire his unparalleled audacity. I suppose this is the secret of John Allen's being put into a magazine, and if the magazine's remarks had a tendency to remind him that the lamp held out to burn, so much the better for the lamp and John Allen too. A regular noonday prayer meeting has been established in his recent case, and there is no knowing but that the religious interest awakened there may be the nucleus of a revival. The lamp held out to burn for John Allen for seventeen years now, and if he ever wanted to intimate that he was aware of the illumination now was the time. The stories that are told about this man of sin and penitence represent him in rather favorable contrast to the people, who have never had so much to be forgiven. But to speak the honest truth, and drop all 'obad' and sensation, his case is simply one of those numerous ones where a person religiously trained and born with naturally strong religious instincts falls away from the religion of his youth, and, through all the vicissitudes of maturity, retains a haughty after it which nothing else in this world will gratify.

Among theatrical mention I ought to have remembered that Mr. William Wheatley retired yesterday from all connection with Niblo's in particular, and theatrical pursuits in general. Mr. Wheatley is not so young looking as he used to be when he was one of the managers of the old Arch Street Theatre, in Philadelphia. He is fair, fat, and—shall we say forty? The days when, at that theatre, he revived the dear old dramas in which Dolman, and Clarke, and Shewell, and John Gilbert, and Mrs. Drew, and Emma Taylor, and himself took part, are still delightful to remember, and I don't believe that Philadelphia has had such a group of good actors since. We have not got them here—except at Wallack's, and that don't open until the latter part of next month.

The Chinese Government having through the Hon. Anson Burlingame conceived the idea of connecting the great seaports of the Empire by submarine electric telegraph cables, we propose commencing operations in China, and laying down a line of 300 miles at once, between the following ports, viz: Canton, Hong Kong, Swatow, Amoy, Foo-Chow, Wal-Chu, Ningpo, Hang-Chen, Shanghai.

The cable being laid, this company propose erecting land lines, and establishing a speedy and trustworthy means of communication, which must command there, as everywhere else, the communications of the Government, of business, and of social life, especially in China. She has no postal system, and her only means now of communicating information is by courier on land, and by steamers on water. The Western World know that China is a very large country, in the main densely populated; but few yet realize that she contains over one-third of the human race. The arts, the manufactures, the central authorities for taxing purposes, by the local magistrates make her population four hundred and fourteen millions, and it is in reality to be understood that over the actual territory. Nearly all of these who are engaged in the arts and manufactures, and who write. Her civilization is peculiar, but her literature is as extensive as that of Europe. China is a land of teachers and traders; and the latter are exceedingly quick to avail themselves of every proffered facility for procuring early information. It is observed in California that the Chinese make great use of the telegraph, though it there transmits messages in English alone. To-day, great numbers of it are in operation, and are owned by Chinese merchants, and used by them exclusively for the transmission of early intelligence. If the telegraph were proposed, connecting all their great seaports, we should in operation, it is believed that its business would pay its cost within the first two years of its successful operation, and would steadily increase thereafter.

No enterprise commends itself as in a greater degree remunerative to capitalists, and so our whole people. It is of vast national importance commercially, politically, and evangelically. Shares of this company to a limited number, may be obtained at $10 each, $10 payable down $10 on the 1st of November, and $20 payable in monthly installments of $20 each, commencing December 1, 1868 on application to DREXEL & CO., No. 34 South THIRD Street, Philadelphia. The English Election Canvass—John Bright's Address to His Constituents. BY THE ATLANTIC CABLE.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—John Bright publishes today a long and eloquent address to the voters of the city of Birmingham. He gives his views on nearly all the great questions at issue, and explains to his constituents the defects of the late reform bill. He reviews at large the question of suffrage, and repeats his desire for such an extension of the franchise as will call into exercise more of the enlightened intelligence of the country.

He denounces the principle of three-cornered constituencies as applied to Birmingham, and says he believes the disestablishment and disendowment of the Irish Church would strengthen both the cause of Christianity and the constitution of the country; and closes by announcing himself as the champion of the principles above set forth, and offers himself as a candidate for re-election to the House of Commons at the approaching general election.

FROM VERMONT. Special Despatch to The Evening Telegraph. Progress of the Election. BURLINGTON, Sept. 1.—The election is passing off quietly. The Democrats are working very hard. The vote in this city will be close, but the Republicans are confident of a small majority. A split among Republicans over the State's Attorney for the county may throw that office into the hands of the Democrats.
